Bern, 31 July 2020 – We are pleased to announce the nominees for the Swiss Medtech Award 2020. Aleva Neurotherapeutics, Rheon Medical and VirtaMed stood out from the other 24 submitting companies and move into the final round competing for the coveted trophy. The winning team will be announced on 21 September 2020 at Swiss Medtech Day in Bern and will also be awarded the innovation prize worth CHF 50,000. The Swiss Medtech Award, sponsored by the Lichtsteiner Foundation, the Straumann Group and Ypsomed, is being presented for the third time this year.

Aleva Neurotherapeutics presented their new generation of Deep Brain Stimulation systems which aim to improve therapy success rates, for example, in Parkinson's patients. Rheon Medical submitted «eyeWatch», the world's first non-invasive pressure equalization system expected to revolutionise the treatment of glaucoma. VirtaMed achieved the nomination with surgery simulators that enable doctors to train their surgical skills using virtual reality in a safe environment.

«I am continually impressed by the innovative power of the Swiss medical technology industry. These technical developments are only possible due to considerable work, perseverance, and passion. In addition, all three nominated companies have already achieved market success with their products» noted Swiss Medtech CEO Peter Biedermann regarding the jury's decision.

A total of 27 applications were received for the Swiss Medtech Award 2020. The jurors evaluated the innovations in a two-stage process under the chairmanship of Prof. Mirko Meboldt, ETH Zurich. Criteria included patient benefits, contribution to improvements in healthcare, pioneering technological spirit, and entrepreneurial performance.

The award ceremony will take place during Swiss Medtech Day on 21 September 2020 in Bern. «Swiss Medtech Day is the most important event for the Swiss medical technology industry. It is therefore the perfect occasion to announce the winner and honour the achievements of the three nominees in front of an enthusiastic audience» says a pleased Peter Biedermann.
